RESPECTED CITIZEN AND MASON PASSES AWAY

Harvey J. Darst Dies at Home Near Rowland-Funeral to be Held Sunday Afternoon

Harvey J. Darst, one of Lincoln county's most substantial and respected citizens, passed away at his home dear Rowland, a mile east of Stanford about eight o'clock Friday morning after a lengthy illness of a complication of ills. News of his death came as a surprise to many of his friends, as a surprise to many of his friends, and few men in this community had more, for wherever he was known he

Young Matron Dies in Somerset

Many friends in this part of the state were grieved to learn of the death, at Somerset, last week, of Mrs. Joan Red-dish Carrigan, who died of puerperal fever. Her death came so unexpectedly and so suddenly that it was a severe blow to the family and a shock to all friends. She passed away within a few minutes after physicians had been summoned. Funeral services were held at the home of her mother on Main street, conducted by Rev. H. S. Saxby.

Fiscal Court to Take Advantage of Change in Road Law-More Money Allowed for Road Work, Too

The Lincoln County Fiscal Court, at three days' session early this week, made the tax levy for the ensuing year, allowed a number of claims apportioned the road levy to the different roads of the county and bought a traction engine to be added to the road machinery now in use by the county, and which will be used for grading. Members of the fiscal court say that overseers will be appointed and hands warned out for work on the dirt roads the county this fall, as was done before the present road law was chang-ed, and as is now permitted under the recent change made in the law by the last legislature. This will enable the men on the dirt roads to pay their taxes by work on the roads. In accordance with the law, the court ordered publication of the delinquent poll and property tax list, which will be done
